

MEET THE CONTRIBUTORS

Young June Chung

yjchung81_cfau@outlook.com

Young June Chung graduated from the Department of Political Science and Diplomacy and the Graduate School of International Studies at Yonsei University. He is now a doctoral student at the Institute of International Relations at China Foreign Affairs University and a part-time researcher at the Tsinghua University Center for US-China Relations. His main areas of interests include grand strategy, diplomatic history, foreign relations and Korea reunification. For his military service, Young June served as a military police officer in the presidential security service of the Republic of Korea.

John C. Corrigan IV

johncorriganiv@me.com

John Corrigan IV is a native of New Jersey. As an undergraduate he majored in English and Spanish, and then developed an interest in international studies through extensive travel and reading. He is currently completing an M.A. in Public Policy from the Harris School of Public Policy at the University of Chicago as part of the Dual Degree Program at the Graduate School of International Studies, GSIS. While at Yonsei, John studied global economy and strategy with a focus on the political and economic empowerment of East Asia, its implications for other nations and changes in the international balance of power.

Steven C. Denney

stevencdenney@gmail.com

Steven C. Denney is a second year master's candidate at the Graduate School of International Studies, Yonsei University. He is the Editor in Chief of the Yonsei Journal of International Studies and a Managing Editor for SinoNK.com, a website that publishes articles and op-eds on Sino-North Korea relations and peninsula-related issues. Steven also works part-time at the Asan Institute for Policy Studies as a print editor. He is currently working on his Master's thesis, which takes a comparative political economy perspective on the historical origins of the developmental states in East Asia and America; he expects to graduate in Spring 2013.

Darcie Draudt

darciedraudt@gmail.com

Darcie Draudt is second-year master's candidate at the Yonsei University Graduate School of International Studies. She completed a year of training at the Yonsei Korean Language Institute and now focuses on postmodern consumerism and the social constructions of gender. She is currently preparing her Master's thesis, an anthropological approach to how class-based consumer identities inform the social construction of commercial spaces in Seoul. Darcie graduated from Davidson College in the US with a B.A. in cultural anthropology. In addition to having contributed to SinoNK.com as analyst for gender issues in North Korea, she has also worked as a field researcher for the Korean branch of the International Organization for Migration.

Dylan Irons

diron86@gmail.com

Dylan Irons hails from the Nashville, Tennessee, area and is a second year master's candidate at the Graduate School of International Studies, GSIS, where he specializes in International Security and Foreign Policy. He received his bachelor's degree in Russian Literary Studies from the University of Tennessee. A long time human rights activist, Dylan has worked on various campaigns advocating rights in East Asia since his arrival to Korea in 2009. He has most recently worked with the NGO Save NK on a visual arts petition to lobby the UNHCR to build refugee camps specialized for North Korean defectors in China, Mongolia and Russia. Dylan is also a co-founder of the International Vine Commission at Yonsei GSIS, which, among other professional programs, hosts bi-annual fundraisers for various charities across the globe. Dylan owes many thanks to Dr. Eun-ha Chang of Yonsei GSIS and Dr. Brendan Howe of Ewha GSIS for their invaluable efforts in shaping his academic path and cementing a foundation for him to pursue a career in human rights advocacy.

Lee Choon-sok

glee125@yonsei.ac.kr

Lee Choon-sok (Gabriel) was born in Seoul but has lived in New York for over 20 years. He is currently pursuing a master's in Global Economy & Strategy at Yonsei University's Graduate School of International Studies and aspires to join the US Foreign Service. Among his many interests, Choon-sok particularly enjoys marathons, photography, blogging and reading.

SeoHyun Lee

leeseohyun@gmail.com

SeoHyun Lee is a second year master's candidate in Global Economy & Strategy at the Graduate School of International Studies, Yonsei University. Her research interest lies in the field of international development and global public health policy. Her master's thesis is about U-healthcare for health equity in Korea, which employs a theoretical framework of "ACCESS: how good health technologies get to poor people in poor countries?" She has previously worked as an intern in the public sector, including the Permanent Mission of the Republic of Korea to the UN, Social Affairs and Human Rights Committee and the OECD Korea Policy Center, Health and Social Policy Programme. Currently, she is working on research projects at the National Cancer Center and Seoul National University, College of Medicine, as a researcher.

Kang-eun Jeong

kkelly0130@gmail.com

Kang-eun Jeong received her M.A. from Yonsei University Graduate School of International Studies (GSIS) in August 2012. She majored in international cooperation with a concentration in international security and foreign policy. During her graduate school years, she focused on security and the economic relationship among regional powers in East Asia. Her main research interests include trade-security nexus, regional architecture in East Asia, FTA networks in East Asia, US-China relations and US-Korea relations. Currently, she lives in Washington DC working at the Embassy of the Republic of Korea in the USA. She is a native of Seoul and fluent in English. Future directions of study will likely include international economics and Chinese language.

Eunsil Esther Park

p.phinehas25@gmail.com

Eunsil Esther Park is a student at the Graduate School of International Studies at Yonsei University. She received a bachelor's degree in economics and politics science from University of Washington. Her major academic interests are the economy-security nexus in East Asia and Chinese foreign policy. Currently, she is working on the South China Sea dispute and the KORUS-FTA. She is fluent in Korean, English and Chinese.