

MEET THE CONTRIBUTORS

Seongbak Jin

Yonsei University

Jinsb13@gmail.com

Seongbak Jin is a student at the Graduate School of International Studies (GSIS), Yonsei University, where she is pursuing research in International Cooperation and Development. In 2011, she received her bachelor's degree in Economics with a minor in Business Administration from Yonsei University. Her interests fall into one of three categories: economic development, NGOs and civil society, and migrant workers.

Dylan Coyle

Yonsei University

dylanraecoyle@gmail.com

Dylan Coyle was born and raised in the San Francisco Bay Area, taught graphic design and storytelling, professionally baked cupcakes, made comic books, produced numerous music and literary events, and managed various retail activities. He graduated from Yonsei GSIS in 2013 with a Masters of Global Economics and Strategy, with a focus on foreign policy, international security, and transnational management. He is currently traveling the world and writing a pop economics book which will eventually be available on his website, dylancoyle.com.

Moctar Aboubacar

A project manager at the World Food Programme's Rwanda country office
moctar.aboubacar@wfp.org

Moctar Aboubacar is a Programme Officer at the World Food Programme, stationed in Rwanda, where he manages the implementation of a bilateral Korean development project. He has previously worked as a policy analyst for the Africa Center for Strategic Studies and the United Nations Development Programme's Seoul Policy Centre in Korea. Moctar holds a master's degree in Korean studies from the University of Korea and a bachelor's degree in international development from Brown University.

Eunsil Park

Yonsei University

pphinehas25@gmail.com

Eunsil Park is an enrolled student at Graduate School of International Studies at Yonsei University and specializes in International Cooperation. She is interested in international relations in Northeast Asia focusing on power dynamics, economic interdependence, and nationalism. She is currently working on her thesis analyzing the South China Sea dispute regarding the economy-security nexus. She also pays attention to the North Korean issues including internal and external politics and published the book review on Moon Chung-in's The Sunshine Policy: In Defense of Engagement as a Path to Peace in Korea.

Robert Winstanley-Chesters

University of Leeds

gy07r3m@leeds.ac.uk

Robert Winstanley-Chesters obtained his doctorate from the University of Leeds' School of Geography. His Thesis was entitled "Ideology and the Production of Landscape in the Democratic People's Republic of Korea", this will be published in hardback form by Rowman and Littlefield's Lexington Press in April 2014 under the title "Landscape as Political Project: Narratives of the North Korean environmental". Robert also has a chapter entitled "Politics and Environmental Development: From Imposition and Transformation to Conservation and Mitigation in the DPRK" published within 2013's "Korea Yearbook : Politics, Economics and Society" and a number of other papers published or under review. Robert has recently been appointed a fellow of the University of Cambridge/Academy of Korean Studies "Beyond the Korean War" project under the direction of Professor Heonik Kwon. He is also Director and Research and an environmental analyst for "SINO: NK: China, North Korea Borderlands, Relations, History" for which he publishes extensively. Robert grew up in Edinburgh, Hamburg and New York and holds undergraduate degrees in Divinity from the University of Edinburgh and a master's degree from Leeds University's School of Geography.

Joel R. Campbell

Troy University

joeljapan2@hotmail.com

Joel R. Campbell is an Associate Professor of Political Science in the Pacific Region (Japan and Korea) of the Global Campus program of Troy University. He teaches in the Masters of Science in International Relations (MSIR) program. He has taught at Tohoku University, Miyazaki International College and Kansai Gaidai University in Japan, as well as three universities in Korea. He has published extensively on his principal research interests, the politics and political economy of Northeast Asia, along with technology policy and international security.

Eunbee Chung

Yonsei University

jeb0711@hotmail.com

Eunbee Chung just graduated from Graduate School of International Studies at Yonsei University with the master's in Global Affairs and Policy in 2013. Her academic interests are international security, alliance politics, international organizations, forces migration and refugee issues, and human rights.

Sunny Park

Yonsei University

sunnypark713@gmail.com

Sunny Park graduated from Miami University in 2011 with bachelor's degree in International Studies and East Asian Language and Culture. Since graduation, she has worked at Robert Walters Korea, a human resource consulting firm, as an associate consultant. She is currently working in the UNDP Seoul Policy Center as a Policy Research Intern while attending the Yonsei Graduate School of International Studies majoring in International Cooperation.